A Small Death In Lisbon

A Small Death in Lisbon by Robert Wilson won the 1999 Gold Dagger Award for Best Crime Novel. It is a complex parallel story set in WWII and in 1999, in Berlin and Lisbon. It begins with Nazis coercing Swabian businessman Klaus Felsen into leaving Berlin to procure wolfram for them (by any means) in Portugal.

A Small Death in Lisbon by Robert Wilson - Goodreads

Had the first 400 pages of A Small Death in Lisbon been edited down to 200 pages he would possibly have had a riveting plot. (The last 50 pages, by the way, were well done.) A major edit of the beginning of the book would probably have clarified the plot for the reader, but I fear that one of its basic problems would have remained. The great ...

"A Small Death in Lisbon" has all of my favorite elements -- interesting and believable characters, a complex mystery plot, a fascinating setting, and two narratives, one in the past, World War II, and one in the present. One reviewer said that the characters were too unlikeable, but I completely disagree.
