John Kessel, "Invaders" We didn't really talk much about this story in class, but I think I liked it best out of the last short stories we had to read. It was funnily written and I really enjoyed reading it, but it was also interesting to have it told in three different little stories: the Inca world of the 16th century, the alien story of the 21st century and then the metafictional comments by the author.

Motives. For invaders in history, the three G's: gold, glory, and God, brought them to the New World – whether that meant expanding into the Western Hemisphere or into less developed areas of Asia and the Pacific. The attractiveness of wealth, the promise of eternal exaltation by peers, and the expansion of Christianity caused many Europeans to...
