I believe if you're in the US it's easiest to buy one ready made from Ashby solutions. Otherwise, as Musicman stated - you will need one SPDT (single pole double throw) for slow/fast and a SPST for the stop switch (see wiki for explanation)- if they should be latching or not I guess is to your liking, I'm going for latching for both switches. I guess you could get them at Radio shack (they seem ...

I have a Neo Ventilator, but never got around to getting a remote. A few months ago, I e-mailed Neo asking about the availability of remotes for the original Ventilator. Guido told me the new remotes for the Ventilator II are NOT COMPATIBLE with the original model Ventilator. He directed me towards Ashby Solutions if I want a remote for my pedal.

I saw that Ashby Solutions sells Vents with a stereo mod that allows the player to do just that...bypass in stereo. ... In addition, Leslies are often stereo-miked (one mic on each side of the grille). The Ventilator emulates this effect, when using a stereo PA rig. Something must have been wrong with the bypass on your Ventilator. I haven't ...

Ashby does have the 3-way, don't think he had any more 2-ways. I must have been thinking of something on Bruce's website that talks about DIP switches, but I finally opened mine up like you suggested and here's the deal: my 2-way is wired Sleeve = Gnd, Tip = Slow, Ring = Fast. Obviously considered latching.

From there it Y's into two paths: one for "Steel" and one for "B3"... an A/B switch selecting which goes to the amps. The "B3" chain is an EH B9 into an Ernie Ball Wah pedal, modified to limit it to a middle range. From there it returns to the Neo Ventilator 2 controlled by an Ashby Solutions half-moon, then to a basic Hall reverb.
