Unbelievable. No one has read "To Build A Fire"?? Just google it for a copy, it's a short story – one of the best ever written. And as you read remember that it was published in 1908 by a man who actually went to the Klondike during the gold rush at the age of 21, after having sailed to Japan on a sealing schooner.

111. JACK LONDON: I would rather be ashes than dust

Relatively few people spend their last hours at home nowadays, with the majority of deaths occurring in hospitals, hospices and care homes. However, opting to die at home, in a familiar environment surrounded by close friends and family, is still a perfectly valid choice for anyone making their final preparations for the event.
